

Admission Pathway Program

Undergraduate programs

The Admission Pathway Program for undergraduate programs is designed to assist Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander applicants interested in pursuing a tertiary education.

Under the program, applicants are eligible for additional adjustment factors (or ATAR equivalent) to assist with entry into UQ.

The program considers a range of competencies other than formal education, such as:

- employment history
- academic abilities
- personal interests
- community involvement
- references

These competencies may also be considered in waiving certain prerequisites.
